

World Food Prize Laureates Call For Action To End Global Hunger As Famine Warnings Rise

G20 leaders have been urged to commit to Brazil's agenda for ending global hunger and poverty by some of the world's most distinguished food security experts amid rising levels of hunger and climate vulnerability.

As the UN warns of imminent famine and extreme hunger in Gaza, Haiti and Sudan, 27 World Food Prize Laureates made the plea for the G20 to agree to a new global plan to tackle the food crisis in an open letter.

Brazilian President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva, who won the World Food Prize in 2011, immediately made hunger and poverty key priorities when the country assumed the G20 presidency in December. His recently launched Global Alliance Against Hunger and Poverty taskforce met for the second time in Brasília last week.

Among the World Food Prize Laureates to sign the urgent call to the G20 were Sir David Nabarro, Co-lead of the UN's Global Crisis Response Group; Professor Gebisa Ejeta, who recently received the National Medal of Science at the White House; and NASA climate scientist Dr. Cynthia Rosenzweig.

As the world faces increasing levels of hunger and climate vulnerability, 27 World Food Prize Laureates have come together to urge G20 leaders to support Brazil's efforts in ending global hunger and poverty. Led by Brazilian President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva, whose commitment to addressing hunger and poverty has been unwavering, the Global Alliance Against Hunger and Poverty is gaining momentum.

In an open letter, signed by eminent figures such as Sir David Nabarro, Professor Gebisa Ejeta, and Dr. Cynthia Rosenzweig, the Laureates emphasize the importance of political will and leadership in tackling the root causes of hunger and malnutrition. With 735 million people currently facing chronic hunger and a quarter of a billion people experiencing acute food insecurity, the need for action is urgent.

The proposed plan includes crucial measures such as fully funding the UN's humanitarian appeals, investing in smallholder farmers, reforming the multilateral financial system, and enhancing cooperation across various sectors. These steps are essential in building resilience and securing a sustainable future for all.

As we celebrate the 110th birthday of Dr. Norman Borlaug, whose groundbreaking work saved countless lives, let us honor his legacy by taking decisive action against hunger. Together with the Hungry for Action campaign, we call upon G20 leaders to prioritize the global food crisis and work towards achieving Sustainable Development Goal 2 – ending hunger in all its forms.

Join us in the fight against hunger. Together, we can make a difference. Learn more at www.worldfoodprize.org/LaureateLetter.
